

by relaxing the rules and guidelines on media ownership the fcc will be removing some of the last and most important protections of our democracy. i understand that this is deliberate on the part of the fcc and is due to political bias by the current head of the fcc whose is the son of colin powell and very likely should be disqualified for this position. i am extremely concerned for the future of information in this country and believe that the current big players who will become enormous under the new rules are not who i want owning the majority of the media i have access to. this is all the more clear when i look at a huge billboard off the 101 frwy in los angeles that preaches a religious message to the cars going by and is paid for by Clear Channel, who also sponsored rallies in support of the war in iraq. few people seem to know much about this company, if it had said supported by ABC the public would have screamed. as a citizen i demand that you do not change the rule.

rosie ramirez